

K.S.James is the professor and head at the Population Research Centre, Institute for Social and Economic Change (ISEC) in Bangalore. He has worked extensively on demographic changes with focus on population and development issues. His areas of interest include demographic and health transition, ageing issues and migration. He has published widely on demographic transition and demographic dividend in India and his paper on the implications of demographic changes in India is published in Science in November 2011. He has been a visiting fellow at the Harvard Centre for Population and Development, Harvard University, USA, International Institute for Applied System Analysis (IIASA), Austria, London School of Economics, UK, and INED, Paris.

