CALL FOR APPLICATION

Indian Health Economics and Policy Association (IHEPA) is organising its third summer school on Measuring Universal Health Coverage at Azim Premji University, Bangalore during June 26-30, 2018. The course targets M.Phil/PhD students and early career researchers and young teachers working in applied health economics and policy issues. It will introduce participants to various approaches to understand universal health coverage with emphasis on both concepts and measurement. A team of scholars will help the participants to sharpen their ideas in the area of health economics and policy and develop it into a full fledged research proposal with strong conceptual and methodological base.

We invite applications along with a short research proposal from interested applicants. The application forms can be downloaded from the IHEPA website (<http://www.ihepa.in/>). The application can also be submitted online through the link available at the IHEPA website. The application will be screened by a Panel of Reviewers of IHEPA and a final decision will be communicated through email.
